

Matti Gold received her musical training in New York with a BA in Music and a MS in Music Education from Aaron Copland School of Music from Queens College City Of NY. Matti has taught music classes for the last 30 years in NYC (faculty of Mannes College Of Music and Queens College preparatory division and The Trevor Day School, an independent K-8 school) and California including the Hamlin School in SF and The Seven Hills School in WC. She has taught children ages 3-14 in classroom settings as well as private piano and wind instruments. She is also a certified Orff-Schulwerk teacher and has spent years as a director of musical theater, chorus and band. In her career, Matti has performed chamber and 4 hand music as well as participated in band and choral presentations.

“I love teaching children music and hope to instill a lifelong love and appreciation of its gifts.”
